

Briana, a 15-year-old girl, is requesting the IUD Birth Control and does not have the consent of her parent. What do you do?

- Tell the patient that she has to come back with a parent's consent.
- Inform the patient that you can and will perform the procedure, but must call a parent to notify them.
- Explain to the patient that you can perform the procedure without parental consent, and that depending on her parent's insurance her parents may receive an Explanation of Benefits.

Answer: (c.) Briana can receive any form of contraception without a parent's consent. However, if the health center does not have protections in place to ensure confidentiality, it is best practice to inform Briana that 1) if she uses her parent's insurance, an EOB (explanation of benefits) may be sent to her parents unless she calls her insurance directly and asks that the EOB be sent to the patient and not her parents; and 2) if a parent requests her medical records, they may access them.

Michael is 14 and is requesting a chlamydia test. He doesn't want to tell his dad, who's in the waiting room. Does he need consent from his father?

- Yes
- No

Answer: No. Minors (patients under 18) have the right to STI testing and treatment without a parent's consent. However, his confidentiality may not be protected if the health center does not have protections in place (see answer above).

Remember, it's best practice in many cases for a provider to encourage teens to talk to their parents/guardians, even if consent is not required. Encouraging this dialogue can be an opportunity to set up successful parent/teen communication.
